

Revolving Door Entrance

Melbourne Central Foyer
360 Elizabeth Street
4 August 2021

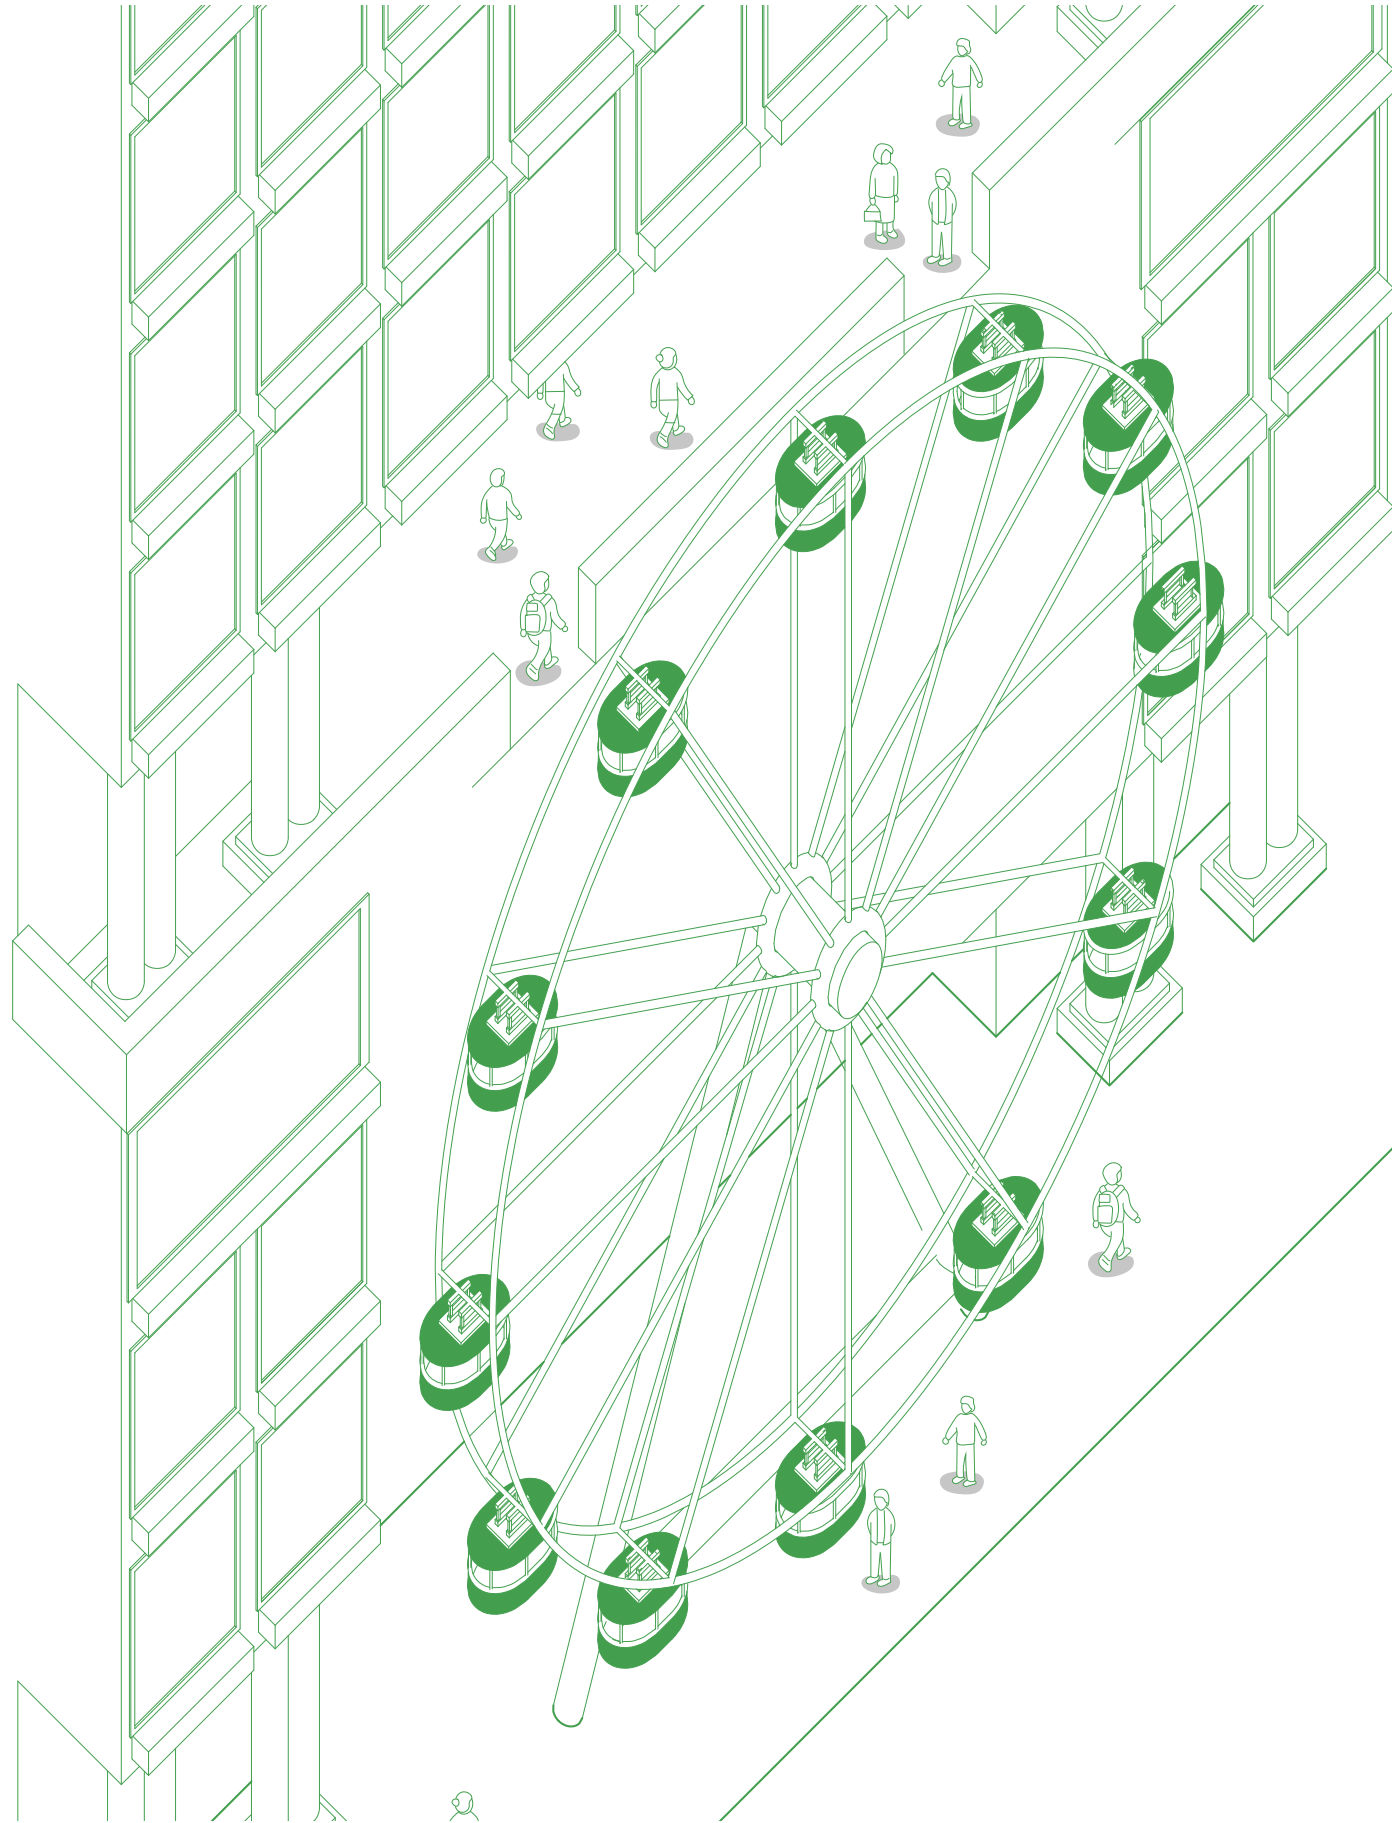

TEMPORARY TRANSITION

Grand entrances accentuate the demeanor of a structure, creating an atmosphere of exclusivity and sophistication. This revolving door located on the corner of Elizabeth and Little Lonsdale Street, invites patrons within Melbourne Central, controlling the flow of movement. The process of transitioning from the external environment to the interior through the revolving door signifies the transformation of ambience for the patron. Similar to a portal, the door and its controlled movement aims to juxtapose between two various environments.

PLAN

In this plan we explore the programmatic values of the revolving door, illustrating its use relative to its setting, controlling the flow of people entering and exiting Melbourne Central.

REVOLVING ACCESS

Altering the original element to now instead rotate on its vertical axis, the narrative now shifts, no longer acting as a temporary transition zone between in and out, but now up and down.
