DIVISION OF PRIVACY

The linear timber facade (B) of the Kathmandu store on Elizabeth St produces an event where pedestrians (C) on the st cannot see in to the second level of the store, providing the people inside (A) with a sense of privacy whilst they are still able to view the pedestrians and surrounding street. The facade over the window enables a division of privacy between shopper and pedestrian, ensuring the shopper feels safe and simultaneously allowing them to still engage with the events outside on the street.

DIVISION OF PRIVACY RE-IMAGINATION

Showcasing the ideas of privacy evident in the building facade, the system and concept is taken and applied to a office building context, fit with private offices and semi private cubicles. The arrangement of walls (B) in the re-imagination reflects element B in the diagram as the physical dividing material and the options of vision are highlighted with overlaying colors and human figures demonstrating interaction and activity. This all happens on the floorplate, indicated as C, in accordance to the diagram.
